Background

A large-scale enterprise, inspired by the success of the Broxburn Oil Company, and equipped with crude oil works, refinery and a candle plant. The Linlithgow Oil Company struggled for profitability throughout its short life. The works were initially equipped, in part, with outdated Henderson retorts, the quality of local shales seldom reached expectation, and by the time the works were opened, market conditions were poor. The company was wound-up in 1902.
